Based in Chichester

My name is Tim Parsons. I have over twenty years teaching experience in primary schools. In that time, I have taught Years 1-6 and led core subjects.

I have published a children's book called My Brother Wears Pink Pants. The book is a collection of amusing stories about growing up with my brother. They have proved very popular with the pupils over the years – especially reluctant readers.

I would be delighted to visit your school to share my book with the pupils.

I read some of the stories to the pupils, discuss the process involved in publishing a book, the importance of editing, show how the stories were planned, questions and answers and pupil involvement in performance poetry (depending on age). My main aim of the visit will be to make it fun and hopefully inspire them. I am happy to hear other suggestions you may have to fit into any particular topic work you are doing.

I am very flexible with how you might like to organise a visit.

- Key stage assembly
- Short visits to year groups / classes
- A mixture of both

I am only available Wednesday mornings due to writing and teaching commitments.

My fee is £125.

If you have any questions, please ask. I hope to hear from you soon.

Thank you.

Tim
